

Denzel Washington

Denzel Hayes Washington was born on December 28 1954 in Mount Vernon New York. The boy is named after his father and was the middle of three children in the family. His mother, who worked in a local beauty salon and in his youth the future actor being there as an apprentice helped her. After graduating from school he entered the University of Fordham in New York where he first studied medicine and biology and then became interested in journalism and theatre. After her studies in 1977 with a bachelor of journalism Washington arrives at the American Conservatory in San Francisco but a year later leaves her and returns to New York where he began acting in television series. In 1981, Denzel starred in his first film, a comedy and a copy of the negative but popularity among the American audience comes to him for her role in the TV series channel NBC St. Elsewhere where he starred for as much as 6 years. The first nomination for an Oscar Washington cautioned in 1987 for a minor role in the film Cry Freedom Richard Attenborough and first gets the coveted situation three years later for playing the role of the second plan in the movie Glory Edward Zwick about the civil war. In 1992, Denzel once again nominated for an Oscar, this time for the role of a religious figure in the biographical picture of Spike Lee's Malcolm X and named by Director Martin Scorsese and film critic Roger Ebert one of the best films of the 1990s. The year 2000 brought Washington a Golden Globe award and the prize for best actor at the 50th Berlin film festival for the role of a boxer in the film The Hurricane. In 2002, Denzel Washington was awarded the Oscar for his starring role in the film Training Day, becoming the second black actor in history of cinema received it in the category of Best Actor the first was Sidney Poitier and the only black actor in the history of film won an Oscar in game nominations twice. In 1990, American Film magazine called Denzel Washington is the main contender for the long vacant place of the First Black Chief Executive of Hollywood and no mistake. By the time the actor has already won an Oscar and a Golden Globe for best actor the second plan being nominated in this same category two years earlier. Ahead of Denzel will be waiting for many of the landmark moments in his career and many years of hard work will give him a real

Link to article: Denzel Washington